

BUSINESS

Local ideas given legs

THE talent and skill in the local aboriginal community is overwhelming, but often never given the chance to develop to the full extent, according to Creative Regions co-ordinator Judy Phippen.

"The goal is to construct business plans for workshop participants, and offer advice on how to shape, run and market a successful business on the back of their existing skills," she said.

"It's focused on artists, but we have people with all sorts of ideas looking for advice."

Anyone interested in attending this week's workshop is encouraged to telephone the Indigenous Wellbeing Centre on 4151 5402.

ABOVE: Artists Nicole Wone and Sandra Marriage display Sandra's painting that hangs in the Indigenous Wellbeing Centre. ind0206b

RIGHT: Jenifer and Michael Keyworth learning about business. ind0206c

Kyle and Aileen Munro, with Leeann Pope from the Jin Jin Burra Corporation, are organisers of the Didgeridoo Festival in Gin Gin each September.

Photos: RON BURGIN ind0206a